

Abstract

In the present invention, discrete decoupling capacitors are mounted on the surface of an IC chip. Since a discrete capacitor can provide the capacitance of the magnitude μF , the attached capacitors can serve as the local power reservoir to decouple the external power ground noise caused by wirebonds, packages, and other system components.